STORY

Hong Kong. Gateway to the Orient…and home to some of the most notorious criminal organizations in the world. To those who work to uphold the law, Kit Yun is their man on the inside. A man capable of turning things around for Hong Kong's embattled police force. A man determined to avenge his father's untimely death by any means necessary.

From the beginning, Kit's goal was simple. Get in and get even. For him, nothing else mattered more than taking down everyone and anyone associated with the organization behind his father's murder.

But that was then…

After being on the inside for so long and after getting a handle on all the players involved in Boss Chiang's once impenetrable organization, Kit has come to realize that nothing is absolute. Out here on the streets, there are those who enforce the law and there are those who break it. And then there are those who are simply caught between both worlds.

Kit is a man caught in the middle. Between good and evil. Between right and wrong. Between loyalty and betrayal. But, above all else, he is a man of honor. A man who will stand behind his beliefs and fight for those who have been wronged. He is a man willing to face the impossible and do the incredible. All so that he can put an end to a criminal empire that has terrorized far too many for far too long.

JET LI BIO

Born in Beijing, Li began studying the art of Wushu (the general Chinese term for martial arts) and was enrolled in the Beijing Amateur Sports School at the age of 8. After three years of extensive training, Li won his first national championship for the Beijing Wushu Team. As part of a world tour in 1974, he had the honor of performing a two-man fight for President Nixon on the White House lawn. For the next four years, he remained the All-Around National Wushu Champion of China.

Shortly after retiring from the sport at the age of 17, he was offered many starring roles and subsequently began on his film career with director Chang Hsin Yen for "Shaolin Temple." Upon its release, Li was propelled into instant movie stardom and the film was an enormous success that spawned two sequels. This led to Li completing 25 successful Asian films before coming to America.

Now, a world-renowned martial arts master and international film star Jet Li burst into Hollywood in 1998 with his first English language film appearance in "Lethal Weapon 4." After completing over 20 films in Hong Kong and China, Li took his first role as a villain starring opposite Mel Gibson and Danny Glover in the Richard Donner film.

Li recently wrapped production on his second movie with director Luc Besson called "Danny the Dog," co-starring Morgan Freeman and was most recently seen in "Cradle to the Grave" opposite DMX.

Upcoming, Li stars in the 2002 Academy Award Nominee for Foreign Language film, "Hero," which was filmed entirely on location in Asia. "Hero," directed by renowned director, Zhang Yimou, will be released in the U.S. by Miramax in April 2004. In 2002, Li starred and produced the films, "The One" directed by James Wong as well as "Kiss of the Dragon," directed by Chris Nahon and produced by Luc Besson. Prior to this, Li garnered rave reviews for his performance in the Warner Bros. box office success "Romeo Must Die."

Recently, Li teamed with Mel Gibson's Icon Productions to produce a martial arts television series entitled "Invincible" featuring the ancient martial art of Wushu, American audiences witnessed spectacularly choreographed action sequences in the Hong Kong film making style.
